

Wound Healing Think Conemaugh Nason First

Taking the First Step

A minor cut or scratch poses little problem to most of us. But, keeping a wound clean and wearing a simple bandage is not enough for some five million Americans. A chronic wound is one that does not have significant healing in four weeks, or has not healed in eight weeks. Wounds can result from peripheral vascular disease, vein abnormalities, diabetes, pressure ulcers, trauma, lymphedema, surgical incision complications, and many other conditions that compromise circulation. Choosing the Conemaugh Nason Wound Healing Program is a step in the right direction.

Our Team

The Conemaugh Nason Wound Healing team is highly-skilled and experienced with treating difficult wounds. The multi-disciplinary team includes, physicians, nurse practitioners, nurses, diabetic educators, nutritionists, and therapists dedicated to helping chronic wounds heal faster. Our team provides meticulous care.

Treating Your Wound

All wounds are different and therefore require an individualized treatment. Often, a combination of modalities is necessary for your care. You can depend on excellent treatment and follow-up care from our team. We will carefully monitor your healing. Your comfort and confidence are important to us.

What to expect

Since chronic wound care is complex, the Nason wound healing team will focus on the patient's health needs to encourage healing and help prevent wound recurrence.

- Your treatment program will require regular visits to the Nason Wound Healing Program. Your primary care physician will be informed of your treatment progress.
- As the patient, you play a key role in the successful treatment of your wound. It is extremely important for you to make all your appointments and follow your treatment instructions carefully. The Nason wound care team is always available to answer questions.
- Most major insurance companies provide coverage for your treatment. Our staff will inquire with your insurance company to make sure you are informed about the coverage for your treatment. Services are covered by Medicare and Medicaid.
- The Nason wound healing team uses the latest techniques, products, and services. Families and caregivers will also be provided with the necessary training to help ensure your wound care plan continues at home.

Our team of healthcare specialists wants to improve your quality of life by making your wound care successful. Consider us a partner in your care. Together, we will work toward a positive outcome of your wound treatment.
